WORKPLACE HEALTH AND SAFETY

The purpose of the Workplace Health and Safety Act (1995) is to create a statutory scheme to ensure workplace health and safety, by the avoidance of injury and disease. The Act applies to those persons present at the workplace whose health and safety may be affected by workplace activities. This includes those who are not employees including students, volunteers, parents and other visitors such as tradespersons.

RATIONALE

Our Catholic faith is guided by the message of the gospels. Our culture has always been one that shows a deep care and concern for each other. “Love your neighbour” was the challenge Jesus gave us, so we should do our best not to hurt our neighbour. As a Church we are required to formulate policies which enable these principles to be put into practice.

VALUES

Care: We care for each other by not causing harm.
Love: We should love our neighbour by protecting them from injury or disease.
Justice: Our workplaces should not create inequality in the provision of adequate working conditions and amenities.
Hope: We strive to make our workplaces safe, healthy and secure to provide positive examples of Jesus’ message of hope expressed through action.
